Co-Parenting Class (4 hours)

“Families First” is a four-hour course courts order to educate parents about co-parenting. The program focuses on concerns parents have about separation and/or divorce, healthy co-parenting, and the impact on children. Instructors provide information through lecture, video, and discussion. Since there are many types of learners, this interactive format uses a variety of teaching styles and tools to deliver critical information to help parents learn to co-parent and navigate separation/divorce in a way that best supports their children. The following topics are addressed: co-parenting, safety and conflict management, emotional effects and reactions to separation and divorce, responding to children’s developmental needs, and financial responsibilities of parenting.
